

Secrets zipped up in the house, concealing all the years of tears.
Coldly ignored, neighbors turn their heads; it's the secret in your home.
Dissembled across your face.
Can't release the pain beyond your front door, for fear he'll really shut you up.
When you stagger from that house, don't dare reveal the Truth.
It must be Repressed. Rejected. Restrained.
So seal your battered mouth, and play dumb to all who see.
Once you return, keep those terrors zipped inside,
Because the panic cannot be shown. To him.
There is hope just yet, But it is not without fear.
You must muster all your strength and UNZIP TO REVEAL.

UNZIPPED

Alicia Rampe, Jessica Denton, Ivet Gesheva

Artist Inspiration: Claes Oldenberg

Chairity 2010